

Experience Quick Tourism in English for Business and Personal Purposes

PERSONAL STATEMENT SAMPLE
TOURISM AND EVENT MANAGEMENT COURSE

Introduction Paragraph

Growing in a small town by the waterfront, I know how important tourism can be to an area. Indeed, during most of the year, my town was just a sleepy and small residential area, with a very modest population in which everyone knew everyone else. Very few people had jobs outside of the hospitality industry, and tourism during the warmer months was what kept the community alive. As a result, it was imperative that events were not only well-planned, but also that they reflected the shifting interests of different demographics of tourists. From a young age, I participated in planning and executing events for the town, and I hope to continue my work in the tourism and event management industry.

Content

Event planning requires not only extreme attention to scheduling and planning for as many contingencies as possible, but also involves extensive market research. In high school, I headed an effort to hold basic classes in various foreign languages such as Spanish, French, and Chinese to account for shifting demographics of visitors who used to speak only English. Finding a venue and a time that fit most of the schedules of those interested was a true hassle, and construction of the venue as well as the first wave of tourists required lots of emergency planning, but at the end, the number of tourists far exceeded the number of the year before.

Closing Paragraph

Over the years, our town has changed many of the attractions and venues offered to tourists, including different ethnic foods and shows by different genres of performers. Part of being in the field of tourism and event management involves knowing and anticipating the interests of visitors, which will dictate what sorts of objectives should be met at the end of the year. One thing I learned from one of my mentors is that the key to doing well is to provide feedback at the end of every event, allowing for reflection and improvement for the next event. I hope to continue learning and practicing in the area of tourism and event management, knowing that it will provide me personal fulfillment and benefit my community.
