1. Be flexible with your travel dates. One of the key strategies to finding cheap flights is to be flexible with your travel dates. If you have the flexibility to travel during off-peak seasons or on weekdays, you'll have a much better chance of scoring a great deal. Use fare comparison websites that allow you to view prices across a range of dates, such as Skyscanner or Google Flights.

2. Consider alternative airports. While major international airports are usually the go-to option, don't overlook smaller regional airports that may offer cheaper flights. Often, flying into or out of a nearby airport can save you a significant amount of money. Research the airports in your desired destination and compare prices to find the best options.

3. Sign up for airline newsletters and fare alerts. Airlines often offer exclusive deals and discounts to their subscribers. By signing up for their newsletters or fare alerts, you'll receive notifications about limited-time sales and special promotions. This can be your ticket to securing those super cheap flights before everyone else.

4. Utilize online travel agencies and flight aggregators. Online travel agencies (OTAs) and flight aggregators are excellent resources for finding cheap flights.

They search multiple airlines and travel websites simultaneously to provide you with a comprehensive list of options at the best prices. Some popular examples include Expedia, Kayak, and Momondo.

5. Use the power of reward programs and credit card perks. Earned miles and credit card perks can greatly contribute to reducing your travel expenses. Join frequent flyer programs offered by airlines and utilize credit cards that offer travel rewards. By accumulating miles and taking advantage of special perks like free checked bags or airport lounge access, you can make your travel experiences even more affordable.

HOW TO FLY LIKE A PRO

1. Choose food carefully. Carb-rich foods, such as spaghetti, whole grain bread, and oatmeal, help induce insulin secretion, which may minimize or even prevent jet lag. 	2. Pack snacks. Protein-rich snacks, such as almonds, peanut butter and crackers, cheese, yogurt, and protein bars will keep you feeling full longer. 	3. Don't stuff your face. It's harder to digest while in the air, so you may want to just eat before boarding and only snack on the plane. Keep in mind that warm foods are easiest to digest. 	4. Request a special meal. Vegetarian, gluten-free, or kosher meals are typically served first, which will allow you to relax and get to sleep sooner.
5. Stay hydrated. Air travel is incredibly dehydrating, so you should drink water throughout the flight—not just when you're thirsty. 	6. Avoid coffee. Caffeine will keep you up, dehydrate you further, and make you irritable. 	7. Drink green tea instead. Consider decaffeinated green tea if it's an option on your flight. It's been said to help stave off the onset of jet lag. 	8. Avoid too much alcohol. Drinking too much will lead to dehydration and grogginess, and may also exacerbate the jet lag you'll experience once you land.
9. Wear loose clothing. Comfortable clothing will make a flight more enjoyable. Men should consider jeans and a T-shirt, and women may want to try leggings and a sweater. 	10. Wear layers. Long flights can mean going from freezing to overheated and back again. Wearing layers will help you keep your body at a comfortable temperature. 	11. Bring a scarf. Scarves can be used as a fashion accessory, a blanket, and even lumbar support. 	12. Bring a neck pillow. Being physically comfortable will improve your mood and will likely help you sleep.
13. Bring lumbar support. Wedge a pillow, blanket, or sweater behind your lower back will keep your spine in its natural shape. 	14. Bring earplugs. Earplugs or noise cancelling headphones will block out the engine's ambient roar and any other sounds that may cause you stress or keep you awake. 	15. Bring an eye mask. It's not the most flattering look, but blocking out light helps with jet lag since light affects your circadian rhythm. 	16. Do in-seat exercises. Avoid pain and even blood clots by rolling your shoulders and rotating your feet for three or four minutes every hour.
17. Bring a power pack. Since you're probably playing games, texting, or checking the weather and traffic, make sure you have some extra juice. 	18. Snag a window seat. A window seat gives you a nice wall to rest on and means you won't be disturbed by beverage carts or other passengers going to the bathroom. 	19. Sit by the plane's wing. Many experts claim that the seats by a plane's wing experience less turbulence since they're closer to the plane's center of gravity. 	20. Wear real shoes. In the case of an emergency, closed-toe shoes are your safest bet because there could be fire, debris or shards of glass.

6. Be open to layovers and connecting flights. While direct flights may seem like the most convenient option, they often come with a higher price tag. Be open to layovers and connecting flights, as they can significantly lower the cost of your journey. Plus, you get the opportunity to explore a new city or enjoy a short stopover before reaching your final destination.

7. Clear your browser cookies and use incognito mode when searching for flights. Did you know that airlines and travel websites can track your search history? This means they may potentially increase the prices of flights you repeatedly search for. To avoid this, clear your browser cookies or use incognito mode to keep your searches private and get the most accurate and unbiased results.

8. Book in advance or last-minute. Booking your flights well in advance or at the last minute can sometimes offer great deals. Airlines may release discounted tickets months before the departure date or offer last-minute deals to fill empty seats. Keep an eye out for these opportunities and be ready to seize them, as they can lead you to incredible savings.

9. Consider budget airlines. Budget airlines have become increasingly popular and can provide substantial savings. While they may not offer all the luxury and amenities of larger carriers, they often offer significantly lower fares. Research budget airlines that operate in your desired destination and compare prices to find the best value for your money.

10. Combine flights and accommodations. Some travel websites and agencies offer package deals that combine flights and accommodations, allowing you to save money on both. These bundled deals can be a convenient way to find super cheap travel packages, especially if you haven't booked your accommodation yet.

Remember, finding super cheap travel deals requires a bit of effort and research, but the savings can be immense. Let go of the idea that flying has to be expensive and start exploring your dream destinations without breaking the bank. Travel like a pro and make those wanderlust-filled dreams a reality.

Start applying these tips and tricks today, and you'll be amazed at how much money you can save on your next flight. Happy travels!
