HERBERT L. CLARKE

THE ARBAN-CLARKE REVISED EDITION FOR THE CORNET AND TRUMPET

The work of revising "The Arban Method" for the Cornet and Trumpet has been done only after years of study of the practising and teaching methods of the world's greatest cornetists in Europe and the United States—men with whom I have been in personal contact for many years. This study or research I consider my authority in the task.

Arban's Method has always been my Standard for correct training in cornet playing. It is not a progressive instructor, but contains everything necessary to become a perfect player, if one selects different groups of exercises designated to produce certain results.

Arban's text, although written years ago, is now as modern and up-to-date as any recent publication for the cornet. I should advise every ambitious student and teacher to become thoroughly familiar with his explanations how to play each group of exercises. It is a good plan, while resting the lips during the practice, to read this text carefully, so as to sense exactly what Mr. Arban tries to impart to the student.

I attribute my success as a cornet soloist largely to getting the sense of Arban's text, after I had studied and reasoned with myself for weeks, months and years; to my practising carefully the exercises to build up firm, elastic muscles of the lips; to my mastering single, double and triple tonguing; and to my gaining absolute control of my wind, lips and fingers.

It is by this authority that I have corrected other publications, indicating proper Metro-nome Tempi and using expression marks with the proper articulation.
